The Geography of Environmental Crime - Conservation ...

Abstract. In the twenty-first century, environmental harm is an ever-present reality of our globalised world. Over the last 20 years, criminologists have made great strides in their understanding of how different institutions in society, and criminal justice systems in particular, respond (or fail to respond) to the harm imposed on ecosystems and their human and non-human components.

Geography of Crime and Geographic Information Systems

Emerging from environmental criminology is the study of geography of crime. Geography of crime addresses the ways spatio-temporal patterns produced through the interactions of people, society, space, time and crime are analyzed.

Environmental Criminology — SAFE DESIGN COUNCIL

Geography was also considered in law enforcement, through use of large pin maps to show where crime incidents occurred. Mapping and analysis of crime is now entering a new phase with the use of computerized crime mapping systems by the police and researchers, with environmental criminology theories playing an important part in how crime patterns are understood.
